and posters which would be displayed. However, though the banners and posters did not display the changed name of the tournament, copies of the programme showing the tournament in the name of Beant Singh and Satwant Singh were distributed to the spectators.

(b) The Indian High Commission in London had taken up the matter with the British Government even before the tournament was held. After the tournament, again, the High Commission made a written demarche to the Foreign and Commonwealth Office of the Government of U.K. pointing out that the event was deeply offensive to the Government and people of India and to the communities of Indian origin in U.K.
